COURSE DESCRIPTIONS

COHORT A: COLLEGE OF BUSINESS AND PUBLIC MANAGEMENT MAJORS

COLLEGE COMPOSITION:

Students will learn the processes, skills, and strategies needed to become rhetorically informed academic writers. The course provides the foundation on which students will build their writing and rhetorical abilities throughout one's academic career and beyond.

SPEECH COMMUNICATION AS CRITICAL CITIZENSHIP:

Students will understand and practice speech communication as a central value of a civil society. This provides the frame for producing, presenting, interpreting and evaluating oral messages in multiple contexts.

CIVIC ENGAGEMENT:

Students will develop an understanding of key concepts and frameworks of civic engagement and public service. Students will learn about the structure and roles of the government and about the concept of civil society and nonprofit organizations and their roles in public service provision and advocacy.

TRANSITION TO KEAN:

Students learn about university programs and services and develop academic skills to function successfully in the university setting.
