Women and the Politics of War

November 7, 2005

“Using Curiosity about Militarization to Make Sense of the Katrina Disaster”

Symposium and Brunch: 11:00AM – 12:30PM
Venue: University Center, Room 226

“Looking for the Women in the Iraq War: Why does it Matter?”

Lecture and Reception: 3:30PM – 5:00PM
Venue: Kean Hall, Room: 127

The Women’s Studies Program in conjunction with the Institute for Foreign Service and Diplomacy invites you to a day of stimulating and provocative conversations on an important and timely topic, Women and the Politics of War.

Our guest speaker for the day, Dr. Cynthia Enloe, Research Professor in International Development and Women's Studies at Clark University, will address students, faculty and the extended Kean community on the topic of women, militarization, and international politics, focusing on the current situation in Iraq. A noted scholar and teacher, Dr. Enloe is a widely published feminist theorist who was voted Outstanding Teacher at Clark University three times. She has conducted research and held visiting professorships in Malaysia, Japan, Guyana and Wales. She is the author of several books, among which are "Bananas, Beaches and Bases: Making Feminist Sense of International Politics" (new edition, 2000) and her latest, "The Curious Feminist: Searching for Women in a New Age of Empire." (2004)

These events are free and open to the public. We look forward to your participation.

For further information, please contact the Women's Studies office, 908-737-4091 / womensp@kean.edu, or the Institute of Foreign Service and Diplomacy in the Center for International Studies, 908-737-7140 / ifsd@kean.edu.